

My Ideal Place

Kelly Lai

An ideal place is meant to be a place where you feel comfortable no matter what happens. To me, the most ideal place is my bedroom, in which are found photos of my childhood, colourful paintings hanging on the wall and a shelf full of medals and trophies that I have won in competitions. Moments of joy and sadness are all experienced in this tranquil place.

My bedroom is not huge or majestic, but big enough to make me feel the warmth and belongingness. The comic books in the cupboard behind the door, which I read when I have time, give me lots of fun. Sometimes when I am too engrossed in the story, I wish that I were one of the characters in it. On the right, a big, white wardrobe connecting the ceiling and the floor is where I keep all my clothes. Hats, tee-shirts, dresses and other items that a fashionista should have are all contained in this wardrobe. At night, I love to do a mini fashion show in order to fulfill my dreams of being a model.

The big window in my room brings light in. In summer, the golden rays wake me up in the morning, filling the room with warmth. After the sun has set, the room becomes cooler. When I am free at night, I turn on the music player and enjoy some nice music. Music fills up the room and this makes me feel relaxed and relieved after a day of hard work.

The small cosy bed is my favourite item in the room. It is where I enjoy my reading, do my homework, or watch TV shows when I am lazy. It is so comfortable to lie in my lovely bed after intense training or a tough day at school!

Those shimmering trophies and medals are my treasures. They are evidence of the efforts I have made and the success that I have achieved. They give me the strength and confidence to overcome the challenges every day.

My room is not luxurious or fashionable in any way, but it is the crampedness and warmth that fascinates me. Every time I come home from a trip, I feel a strong sense of 'home sweet home'. In a year's time, I am going to leave this place, which I love so much. I am sure that no matter where I am, my room will always be the most ideal place for me.
